Cam,

Thank you for your prompt response and for meeting with me to discuss my concerns regarding my role as Marketing Director at Blackstream Christie's International Real Estate, Contender America, and Nash Homes. I appreciate your willingness to document our conversation and to take my concerns seriously.

I would like to formally reiterate and clarify the issues I have experienced in my position:

- Since assuming the role of Marketing Director, I have not been granted the authority typically associated with this position, including decision-making power over staff, budget allocation, or the ability to implement advertising and promotional strategies. These responsibilities are standard for a marketing director and are essential for fulfilling the role effectively. They are also part of my job description for each of these companies.
- Despite providing the requested marketing plan, I learned today that Michael Mumma, CEO had already initiated steps toward my reassignment to Contender America several weeks ago, without my prior knowledge or involvement.
- My access to necessary files and information has been repeatedly restricted by Hayley, which has directly impeded my ability to perform my job duties. I have reported these access issues on multiple occasions.
- Key marketing decisions have been made by leadership without my input or notification, further preventing me from executing my responsibilities as directed.

These ongoing issues have significantly limited my ability to fulfill the core functions of a Marketing Director, which, as outlined in industry standards, include overseeing the marketing department, developing and executing marketing strategies, managing budgets, and leading staff. The lack of communication, authority, and access has not only affected my performance but has also created confusion regarding my current and future role within the organization.

I am committed to contributing to the success of Blackstream Christie's International Real Estate and would appreciate clarification on the following points:

- The scope of my current responsibilities and authority as Marketing Director.
- The rationale and process behind the decision to reassign me to Contender Development, and how this aligns with my career trajectory and the company's needs.
- Steps that will be taken to ensure I have the necessary access, resources, and authority to perform my role effectively, should I remain in my current position or transition to a new one.

Thank you again for your attention to these matters. I look forward to your response and to working together to resolve these issues constructively. Please let me know if you require any additional information from my end.

Best regards - Beth
